Market launch of invoicefetcher®

Schoenefeld, March 2017

Today Phillip Strauch, founder and managing director of the start-up invoicefetcher® announced the market launch of his company on the first day of the Cebit in Hannover.

The kickoff took place at the very well attended booth C20/12 in hall 11 on Monday. The innovative cloud software developed in Brandenburg-Schoenefeld downloads digital invoices fully automatically.

Invoicefetcher® also offers everything that makes downloading and sorting digital receipts as convenient as possible, from free services for private customers to professional accounts with several clients.

Phillip Strauch was overwhelmed by the good responses and number of pre-orders: „Of course I had hoped that we would get off to a good start. Despite my optimism, I am surprised by the positive feedback.“

During the first hours of the Cebit, young innovative companies, representatives of large corporations, tax consultants and accountants found out about how they can dramatically simplify bookkeeping with invoicefetcher®.

About invoicefetcher

Pick up, receive, organise and archive incoming invoices: The new German cloud service provider invoicefetcher® picks up invoices from web portals regularly and fully automatically. It saves time, money and nerves of tax consultants, accountants, freelancers and entrepreneurs. Established bookkeeping softwares, ERP systems and document management softwares are increasing in their value thanks to invoicefetcher®.

In March 2017, the company founded by young entrepreneur Phillip Strauch and based in Brandenburg-Schoenefeld started with the goal to automatise the process of receiving and collecting digital receipts for private customers and business people.

Currently, there are four options: from free accounts to professional access for large corporations with several clients. Receipts are saved for 10 years. Data storage (on German servers) complies with German data protection regulations.
